MINUTES LOST PER MONTH

_____ min

Add it up at the end of the week.

The Friction List

For one week, write down every annoyance. Every time something feels slow, repeated, or stuck. Start with what annoys you, not with AI features. Then rank the list by minutes per month.

TASK	FRICTION TYPE	MINUTES EACH TIME	HOW OFTEN	MIN / MONTH	WHO'S INVOLVED	RANK
Example: cleaning up duplicate records by hand	TL WR PW	60	5x a week	1,300	Team member	1

THE THREE KINDS OF FRICTION

TL · Time lost. Manual, repetitive work. The stuff you do the same way every time: copying, sorting, typing the same email again.

WR · Work repeated. Re-keying, rework, and fixing errors. Typing the same customer into two systems.

PW · People waiting. Handoffs, approvals, chasing someone down for an answer. Nobody is working. Everybody is waiting.

Min / month: minutes each time x times a month. Daily on workdays is about 22 times a month. Weekly is about 4.3.

Save this number. It's your starting number. Later in this course, you'll use it to measure whether AI actually paid off.

BEFORE YOU START FIXING

Not every problem is an AI problem.

Copy your top five items from page 1, ranked by minutes per month. Check what kind of fix each one needs. Those fixes don't cost a thing. Do them first. Whatever's left is where automation and AI can actually help.

Policy problem
Maybe two people approve the same thing, and only one needs to.

Training problem
One person takes twice as long because nobody showed them the faster way.

Just stop doing it
A report nobody reads. A step nobody needs.

TEAM CHECK · 10 TO 50 PEOPLE

Interview your team. 15 minutes each.

The person doing the task knows where the friction is. Not the owner. Not the software company. Hold at least one 15-minute interview per role, using page 3. Ask the same three questions every time.

1. What feels like a waste?
2. What do you wait on?
3. What do you redo?

Then put the leadership list next to the frontline list. They won't match, and the gap between them tells you a lot.

TEAM INTERVIEW · 15 MINUTES

Where does your time go? Three questions.

What this is for. We're looking for the parts of your work that feel slow, repeated, or stuck, so we fix the right things first. There are no wrong answers, and nobody is in trouble for anything they say.

> You know this work best. Small, everyday annoyances count. They're usually where the hours hide.

ROLE	INTERVIEWED BY	DATE

1 What feels like a waste?

Work you do the same way every time, by hand.
